Added in the Technical Team Update and the GM Mode Update coming to FIFA Ultimate Team, HyperMotion allows players to control the ball with greater precision and with greater creativity on the ball. While it is not a new feature in FIFA, HyperMotion is using a total of 22 players' video data to generate movement on the ball, allowing the players to make the difference, and players to be the difference. The introduction of "HyperMotion Technology" (HM) makes play much more frenetic, and give players more freedom to perform on the ball. A number of features and changes have been introduced, to ensure that control players' movements and aim better, based on motion capture data from players that played the game. These features and changes are now available to play in FIFA Ultimate Team and to play live in the Technical Team Update that is coming to FIFA 22. New Skill Movements HM introduces greater improvisation in the players' movement. Players are now able to control the ball with greater freedom, and have greater control of their movements and aim. Following training in the HM labs, we have improved the efficiency and precision of dribbling, passing, shooting, and shooting combinations with teammates. HM can be a very useful tool if used with the player's abilities. Making the Impact In a match, the most skilled player is often the difference between victory and defeat. HM assists players with impacting the game, and allows them to control the football with greater precision, and have greater control over their movements and aim. In "High Tempo Play" mode, HM can make the difference. Spiral Dribbling While there is a lot of pressure on players to get the ball past the defence, they must also avoid the pressure from defenders. No one likes to be chased by a defender, and chase after the ball with no chance of getting past the defence. By using HM in the "spiralling" style of dribbling, the defenders get the ball so fast that the defender is unable to catch up. Helping the Offside HM will help on-ball defenders as they wait for the wingers to cross the ball. The skills that were added to the movement system were tested in the HM labs. The findings in the labs were very important to understanding player movement and movement in general. Improved on-ball controls and

What's new in FIFA 22? The new Dynamic Player Model brings the players to life, giving players that have been injured a new and improved simulation. Now goalkeeper and central defenders react to shots taken at them dynamically, meaning when a shot is sent the goalkeeper's position on the field changes with him and he'll push to players to create an angle to save the ball. No longer are players flat on the ground when you take a shot, defenders will push off the ball, and defenders will come out of their position to challenge shots. Throw in dynamic contact and collisions and you get a whole new level of athleticism that brings the game to life. FIFA Ultimate Team allows players to play over a million unique player cards from around the world, with each card containing some details on the player's character and how they play. Every player has over 60 unique attributes, with the ability to affect your team's performance in important areas: Speed, Stamina, Technique, Strength, Style, Agility, Intelligence, and Grit. Every player has strengths and weaknesses, allowing you to build your team to dominate on the pitch. New Pass and Tackling We've completely overhauled the Player Impact Engine, featuring a new high-speed pass and tackle system. Players now react and react differently to interceptions, passes and tackles, and a completely new physical model helps drive the performance of the game. Different things happen when you head the ball for a pass: You may get the ball "inside out," meaning your teammate will get the ball instead. You may also get the ball "backward," which means your defender may be placed in a completely different position. Players now react and react differently to interceptions, passes and tackles.
