One of the world's most bloody wars, The Thirty Years' War

In the early 17th Century, when the global balance of power was in a constant state of flux, European states' alliances increasingly swung towards neighboring Sweden. The alliance between France and Spain against the Habsburg army effectively signalled to Sweden the momentum was on its side. While the direct outcome was not as clear-cut as might seem, it was by no means a pre-planned or even inevitable development.

A "fatal error" in 1621, saw France shifted away from the Swedish cause while the Spanish definitely had their eyes on Poland.

The following spring the French moved into the Spanish Netherlands in a bid to catch the French by surprise. Despite stiff resistance, they occupied Brussels in March and the strategic city of Maastricht a few weeks later. In the same month of October there was a new assault on Thebesain, but this proved no more successful.

Despite Spanish successes in Poland in the late autumn of 1621, the year was to bring no peace. The long-suffering Louis XIV's Treaty of The Hague in April 1622 formally marked an end to the hostilities, but only after a large French occupation army swept up into the Spanish Netherlands and occupied several large cities in the coming months. The brief period of relative peace was effectively destroyed when in June 1622, one of those cities was transferred to the Duke of Tuscany.

The Thirty Years War was a worldwide conflict. Some of the places it raged included Bavaria/Austria, France, Flanders and Habsburg-controlled Hungary/Austria. As only Europe was affected in any significant way, only Europe is covered in this scenario pack. You will need an online account to load the scenario pack and access the Multiple response models have been proposed in an attempt to improve the clinical interpretations for multiple therapeutic response data under a survival framework. A more convenient and robust testing procedure for the number of disease trajectory classes is proposed based on joint quasi-likelihood estimation. The joint quasi-likelihood estimation leads to a semi-parametric model that allows for non-proportional hazards within each class. The performance of this joint estimator is assessed through a simulation study in terms of bias and root mean squared error (RMSE). Simulations are conducted to evaluate the performances of the joint estimator for evaluating the number of disease trajectory classes, where true underlying parameters are chosen as an example. The method is applied to an ovarian cancer clinical trial data to estimate the number of disease trajectory classes in this cancer disease progression data. This method can achieve a good fit as far as the shape of the relationship of response over time. This method is shown to be a very effective way to improve the clinical interpretation of cancer clinical trials. In a prior video, voice control was demonstrated with the zWave device set to be a three-way switch. Now the zSwitch is simple on/off functionality with the ability to add a controller to the system using the manual controller. V2.0 over the air firmware is in and the zWave.com website has been updated with updated firmware (v2.0.2) and the manual controller application.
